

PLAYED PARTY IN HIS SPEECH

John F. Doherty Talks To The Democratic Gathering On Jacksonian Principles.

REPUBLICANS ROUNDLY ABUSED

Brilliant Address By Young Attorney Who Has Spoken
In This City And Has Many Friends
In Janesville.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 12.—Wisconsin democrats will meet in the state convention in this city this afternoon to choose the four delegates at large and ratify the selection of the twenty-two district delegates to the national convention to be held in Denver. The delegates named at this convention will be elected at the primary election to be held in a few weeks. That the delegation which will go to the national convention will be unanimous for the nomination of Bryan is a foregone conclusion.

The convention was called to order by H. H. Manson, the state chairman, who introduced John F. Doherty of La Crosse as temporary chairman. In the conclusion of Doherty's speech the usual committees were appointed and an adjournment taken until tomorrow afternoon. Mr. Doherty said:

"The temporary organization of a political convention is merely the scaffolding upon which we mount to higher things. The temporary chairman is so quickly brushed aside that he has little opportunity to display his knowledge of parliamentary procedure. Custom and precedent, however, accord him the privilege of the fleeting upon the assembled delegates political oratory. I will not break with custom. I will not depart from established usage.

"Some say that the holding of this convention is contrary to the spirit of the primary law and that the convention itself has no legal status. When we reflect upon all the democratic conventions which have been held through the history of our party, we are not justified in replying that the holding of a democratic convention, in the language of the law, has become a 'rule of property?' But granting that the convention has no legal standing, we who gather here have certainly within our power to question our motives. There is no power without which dare challenge our right. We believe that we can get at the wishes of the democracy of this state in this representative convention much better than our opponents can arrive at the wishes of the rank and file of their party, by a few leaders using the long distance telephone to Washington.

"We meet as the representatives of a great and living party in a great and growing commonwealth. To make suggestions to the democracy of this state as to whom should be selected at the primaries to represent them in the next democratic national convention, in a larger sense, we meet to renew our allegiance to those great fundamental principles of government, proclaimed and enunciated by Thomas Jefferson, applied and proved by Andrew Jackson, and in this latter day made resplendent and illumined in the light of that master intellect, William Jennings Bryan.

Jefferson taught that the source of all power in government is in the people—that the people should rule. He taught again that all men, rich or poor, high or low, should be given equal opportunities, or as it is more often expressed, there should be equal rights for all; special privileges for none. He taught again in that immortal document, the magna charta of our liberties, the declaration of independence, that all men are created equal and are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Following that later truth and sixty years before Abraham Lincoln, in the declaration of a civil war, signed the Emancipation Proclamation. Jefferson had taught the freedom of the slave. The wandering of the democratic party from that one principle of Jefferson's teaching, has cost that party from that one principle of Jefferson's teaching, has cost that party a merited retribution, but it has cost our country forty years of public service by a political party based on false ideas of government and dominated at times by the most corrupt element which has ever plundered a free people. On the contrary, the wandering of the republican party from the example set by Abraham Lincoln, that fell from millions of black men at his command and revolting them for use in the Philippine Islands should cost that party forty years of political obscurity.

"You cannot study the principles of Jefferson too often or too long. Some may say those principles are plain. They are plain. They were taught by a plain man, and for the use of a plain people, not for a few but for all. But while those principles are plain, the application of them to conditions as they arise demands intelligence of the highest order as well as patriotism of the purest type. You cannot distinguish a democrat from a republican in the more schedules of a tariff law. You cannot determine a man's politics from the position he may take regarding the details of any piece of legislation. We must take a broad view, we must study the motives, the purpose, the design, the end to be accomplished in legislation. Applying Jeffersonian principles to a tariff law, for instance, I assert boldly for the support of the government, it is right; its underlying purpose is to furnish revenue for the support of private interests. It is wrong. The same reasoning and the same logic may be applied to all other kinds of legislation.

"In the nomination of Jeffersonian principles, I believe lies the real hope for the success of this republic. False ideas may thrive for a time. The intervention of a political accident may give an undeserving party a limited lease of power, but just as sure as this government will continue to live, just as sure as the people finally assert themselves, just as sure as they demand justice and equal opportunity for all men, let us not entertain the false notion that the triumph of democracy means the triumph of the poor as against the rich. It is natural that such false ideas should occur on page 6.

ENGLISH KING AND QUEEN DISQUIETED BY LATE NEWS

Assassination In Portugal And News Of Czarina's Condition Causes Gloom Over English Court.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

London, Feb. 12.—Recent events have combined to throw a pall of gloom over the English court. The assassination of the Portuguese king and queen prince and the present disturbed condition of affairs in Portugal have affected King Edward and his queen. Ever since the days of the Portuguese war Portugal and England have been close allies. Of late years this alliance was further cemented by the warm personal friendship of King Edward and King Carlos. No royal visitor was ever more welcome at the English court than the genial, sports-loving Carlos. This friendship on the part of King Edward was extended to the Portuguese minister at the Court of St. James, the Marquis de Soveral, who for years has been numbered among King Edward's most intimate friends. Under the circumstances it is but natural that his majesty should regard the taking off of the Portuguese monarch and his son as a personal loss.

Recent news from other quarters has likewise caused much uneasiness to England's king and queen. The boldness and success of the anarchistic element that perpetrated the Lisbon outrage has caused renewed apprehension for the safety of the king and queen of Spain, the latter being one of the favorite nieces of King Edward. Neither Queen "Lina," nor her English relatives have ever recovered from the shock of the attempt made on the lives of King Alfonso and his bride on their wedding day. It is an open secret that the young Spanish ruler is marked for death by the international band of anarchists and revolutionists known as the "Red Terror." It is felt to be only a question of time before their well-laid plots of assassination succeed. The assassins almost invariably choose a public appearance of their victim as the occasion for the attempt on his life, on such occasions, in fact, as the king would naturally be accompanied by his consort. There is small wonder, therefore, that the mother of the Spanish queen, Princess Henry of Battenberg, should live in daily dread of the future and that this fear should be shared by all the members of the English royal family.

On top of all this the English court has received from St. Petersburg news of the most disquieting character. There is no longer any attempt to disguise the fact that the condition of the Czarina is hopeless. Even the official bulletins issued from the sick room are no longer of a hopeful character. Never a robust woman, the perpetual and over-haunting dread of the assassin has brought on a nervous disorder for which there is no cure. To this has been added other ailments, including an affection of the lungs and failing eyesight. News of her death at any time would cause no surprise to those acquainted with her condition.

The Czarina, like the Queen of Spain, is a great favorite with King Edward and Queen Alexandra. Her mother was the well-beloved Princess Alice, sister of King Edward, and, though her father was from Hesse, it did not make her a whit the less English. Her girlhood days were spent chiefly in England and her sweet disposition and unassuming ways won for her the love of all her English relatives.

The troubles of his relatives have had a most depressing effect on King Edward. He has become noticeably peevish and whimsical and apt to be "put out" by the smallest trifles, traits of character of which his majesty has been free all his life. He grasped with alacrity the excuse afforded by the death of King Carlos to abandon or curtail all of the functions planned for the English court for the spring months. He has come to find such things a decided bore and is glad of any opportunity to escape them. On the advice of his physicians the king is planning to go to the continent much earlier this year than has been his custom, and if the news regarding the Czarina's condition continues of the same unfavorable character he will probably pay an early visit to St. Petersburg.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, Feb. 13, 1868.—No. 10,000.—There was no
 meeting of the council last evening,
 the quorum being present.

Boat Theft—While Mr. J. F. Antist of the Town of Rock was attending the donation at Afton last evening, a young man by the name of Charles Baldwin entered his house and stole a suit of clothes. On his return from Afton Mr. A. was informed by Mr. Church that some person was seen going from the house with clothing. Mr. Antist in company with constable Taylor followed the thief to Beloit where they found him waiting at the Western Union Co. R. depot for a train. He was brought to this city where he will probably find quarters at the Putnam House.

The Times special says that Thad Stevens has prepared a strong report recommending the prohibition of the articles of impeachment by the House, which he says that he is determined to push through. One of the Democratic members of the committee expressed the opinion, in their meeting

 but the remainder got ashore. The other boats landed in a marsh and being drenched with water nearly per-

 for a mile, reached a farm house where they were humanely entertained. They saved their lives.

AMERICAN CAR IN LEAD IN BIG RACE

SIX AUTOMOBILES LEAVE NEW YORK FOR RUN TO PARIS.

THOUSANDS SEE START

Broadway is Blocked and Traffic is Suspended as Machines Set Out on Their Long Journey.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Feb. 13.—Of the six automobiles entered in the New York to Paris race, which started Wednesday, the Thomas, De Dion and Zast cars passed through this city early Wednesday afternoon. The Protos (German) car arrived at 6:30 at night and did not leave until morning. The Moto Bloc and Stalpe Na-din (French) cars were somewhere between this city and Peekskill. The Thomas (American) car was the first to arrive here, making the trip from New York in three hours and 55 minutes.

Three Arrive at Hudson.
 Albany, N. Y., Feb. 13.—Telephone advices from Hudson at midnight were to the effect that three of the six automobiles in the New York to Paris race had arrived at that city, the American car being first. The crews report much difficulty with heavy snowdrifts. The start for Albany was made in the morning.
 Start from Times Square.

New York, Feb. 13.—The six automobiles contesting in the New York to Paris race started from Times square,
 Forty-second street and Broadway, Wednesday cheered by a throng of several thousand people. Accompanied by more than 200 motors of all descriptions the racing machines made their way up Broadway and Riverside drive to the city limits, where they turned north on the road to Albany.
 From that city the route to San Francisco, which is the objective point of the first stage of the trip, lies across New York state to Buffalo, thence through Cleveland and Toledo to Chicago, to Omaha, Cheyenne, Ogden, Reno, Goldfield, San Luis Obispo and San Francisco. Mayor McCallan was to have given the word to start, but was delayed, and Colgate Hoyt of the Automobile Club of America took his place.

Traffic is Stopped.

All traffic in the neighborhood of Times square was stopped a half hour before the start. Automobiles clogged the intersecting streets and lined the route for many blocks up Broadway.
 No such aggregation of machines has been seen in or about New York since the last Vanderbilt cup race was run. A band in the official grandstand played the anthems of the nations as the cars lined up for the start. A plot shot sent the contestants away amid the cheering of the people and the hoarse hooting of hundreds of automobile horns.

 leader, is suffering with paralysis of one leg that threatens to become permanent.

Wanted Only Important Facts.
 An American speeding over the continent of Europe in his automobile asked of his chauffeur: "Where are we?"
 "In Paris," shouted the man at the wheel, and the dust flew. "Oh, never mind details," irritably
 screamed the American millionaire,
 "I mean what continent?"

Ten minutes—and no work whatever— to serve a hot meal with Van Camp's.

Simply heat the can in hot water, then open it. Pour out the beans, and you get the same freshness, the same savory odor, as when they came out of our ovens.
 Keep a dozen cans in the house. You will want beans
 every day for one meal, when you know Van Camp's.
 Beans are Nature's choicest food—84 per cent nutriment.

No home-baked beans can compare with Van Camp's. You lack the facilities

A fierce heat is required to make beans digestible, and you cannot apply it. That's why your beans are heavy.
 You lack the live steam that we use in our baking.
 Your beans are broken and mushy. Ours are nutty and whole.
 And you can't bake the beans, the tomato sauce and the pork all together, as we do. You lose our delicious blend.

Van Camp's pork and beans baked with tomato sauce

You don't know how good baked beans can be until you once try Van Camp's. There are no others like them.
 No others have that nutty flavor—that sparkling zest—
 that piquant tang. None are so mealy, so digestible.
 We have spent 47 years in learning how to perfect this dish. Is it any wonder we know how best to prepare it?

Van Camp's command, by several times over, the largest sale in the world

One reason is this: We pay seven times what some beans cost to secure the best beans that are grown.
 Another is this: We spend five times as much to make our tomato sauce as the price of some sauce ready-made.
 You will never buy other brands—no matter how cheap
 they are—when you once know Van Camp's.

should prevail. Forty years of republican ascendancy, forty years of high tariff, forty years of legislation in favor of interests, forty years of millionaires—making with all the accompanying evils of monopolies, pools and trusts—has naturally brought to the support of the republican party the organized forces of predatory wealth, while it has also, just as naturally, brought forth from the democracy both on platforms and on the hustings a bitter arraignment of the money power. But we must not forget that the democratic principle of equality does not mean equality in wealth, equality in social standing, equality in brain power, equality in energy—that cannot be. It means equality of opportunity, and the limitation here upon the poor as well as the rich. Jefferson himself was a big man, and his contemporaries no principle that would array class against class, rich against poor, employer against employee. There is perhaps today no much danger, if not more, that the man of wealth may be injured, that capital may be despoiled as there is that the poor man may be crushed under foot. To do an injustice to one class is just as undemocratic as it is to do injustice to the other. I am not that it is not democratic to attach a stigma to the word "corporation." It is not undemocratic to honor the man of honest wealth, of honest industry, the man who is the employer of labor, the honest wage earner, who treats his employees as men and not slaves.

"I must say, my friends, that as I attempt to follow the trend of political affairs I am afraid of these radical republicans. They have been so fast in the last few years that they have become like inflated balloons, and soaring around in the political sky we hardly know where they are going to land. "A torch in the hand of a child is a powder mill" is scarcely less dangerous than is this new type of political eruption. Isaac Stenhouse, the great old man from Maine, once said a man who has been a staunch republican all his life and has now reached that age at which most men retire, was elected to the United States senate last winter on a platform in which he declared for an income tax, for election of United States senators by the people, on a platform opposed to a ship subsidy and which called for prompt revision of the tariff—four distinct ideas—all democratic, but no one of which ever found lodgment in a republican national platform. I am afraid of these radical republicans. I am afraid of the majority of the republican congressional delegation from this state who about themselves boast in their denunciations of trusts and monopolies when they are at home, but who return to Washington and with the exception of two, complacently cast their votes for a ship subsidy bill, the most monstrous piece of legislation designed to favor special interests that came before the last congress. I am afraid of these radical republicans. I am afraid of the inconsistency of a La Follette who helped build with his own hands the infamous schedules of the McKinley tariff law of 1890, and has never since repented for it, and who today stalks up and down the country attacking with all the venom of his nature every trusts and corporations indicted up or foretold by that act of perfidious legislation. I am afraid of these radical republicans. I am afraid of the inconsistency of a Roosevelt who allowed a member of his own cabinet and his private secretary as chairman of the republican national committee to receive contributions from all the great trusts as well as life insurance companies of this country to promote his own election in 1901, and who within a fortnight delivered a tirade against the power of wealth which would put the most radical socialist completely in the shade. More recently indeed is a Cannon, and an Aldrich, or a Spooner who at least are consistent in their error, than those men who plan to turn the results of their own viciousness into a golden cloud in which they seek to ride on the clouds to the dizzy heights of their own ambition.

"First and foremost, the democratic party should go before the people in the approaching campaign and demand a revision of the present tariff. Two years ago our republican friends told us that there would be no revision of the tariff until after the congressional election, and after election they said there would be no revision because the people did not demand it. Last winter the republican legislature of Wisconsin passed a resolution calling on the President to call a special session of congress to revise the tariff, but a rather regular session will adjourn and these sacred schedules still remain. A few years ago Governor Cummins of Iowa said: "All the robberies and thefts committed by all the insurance companies in the United States are not as much extortion as the Dingley bill for one year." And yet these sacred schedules still remain. Republican legislators have pleaded and republican newspapers have appealed for a revision of the tariff, but these sacred schedules still remain. And they will remain until an outraged public opinion will again place the democracy in power. Then will the "full dinner pail" be somewhat deflated and mended, but still to be flowing by some of the public of 1907 be consigned to the last resting place in the graveyard of party schemes. It will be buried under the auspices of the Ancient Order of United Workmen and the uniformed rank will march with muffled drum and measured step to the tomb. There it will lie along side of the almost forgotten creations of the past. There on one side of that weather-beaten slab in letters faded and obscure we may read: "The foreigner pays the tax." Further up the slope over a new-made mound in characters still bright and undimmed by time are recorded the melancholy words, "The tariff should be revised by the friends of the yellow dog." While yonder where the yellow dog lies as if still waiting for the dead, we can see the outlines of what was once a "free trade" man, but the "free trade" is gone and nothing but "free soup" remains. There along side of it follows "the full dinner pail" will be consigned to eternal rest, unwept, unhonored and unsung.

"Closely coupled with the tariff question is the question of trusts. The democrats have said that the protective tariff is the 'mother of trusts.' Our republican friends deny this but as high an authority as Secretary Shaw has said, 'The protective tariff is not the mother of trusts, though it is the parent of conditions that are profitable to a combination.' While Mr. Havemeyer, president of the sugar trust, testified before the industrial commission: 'Without the tariff I doubt if I should have dared to take the risk of forming the trust. It could have been done, but I certainly should not have risked all I had, which was then embarked in the sugar business, in a trust unless the business had been protected as it was by the tariff.' I say in all fairness that while I believe trusts would exist in a certain product without a protective tariff, that the protective tariff coupled with favored railroad rates have brought about these industrial combinations. But while the protective tariff is the creator of trusts or the creator of conditions which produce them, I believe that ultimately the creature will destroy the creator. Beautiful indeed were the appeals made in behalf of the protective tariff that it was necessary to build up American industry, and maintain the wages of the American laborer; beautiful indeed were the promises of thriving industries, of chimneys belching forth their smoke, and the long line of furnaces lighting up the horizon with the bright flames of the trip-hammer and the clank of the loom; beautiful indeed were their pictures of the American farmer, his face gleaming with satisfaction, born of a consciousness that he had a market for his products, going proudly forth with upturned sleeves in toil. Similar word pictures and like appeals, in the light of present day conditions will now fall if I mistake not on ears deafened to their sounds. My countrymen, I believe that when we can bring to the American farmer and the American laborer, who are likewise the American consumer, independence and peace that every single trust in this country whose products are sheltered by a protective tariff can and does sell its goods in the foreign market cheaper than it sells at home—then I believe that we shall have torn the mask from hypocrisy and caused the sunshine of truth to shine upon the immutable to pour into American hearts and American homes.

"And then, my friends, the democratic party must go into this campaign to enter a protest against a policy of militarism and war. We must enter a protest against the policy of erratic executive who one day used his good offices to bring peace again in Russia and Japan, for which he justly received the plaudits of all the world—and who the next upon the mere pretext that a few Japanese school children excluded from the public schools of San Francisco would cause Japan to fight, manned and set sail the largest and most powerful fleet that ever floated on the seas. In time of peace or war, Governor Black phoned Roosevelt in nomination a few years ago well knew the character of the man and knew that his policy on war would find welcome in the responsive breast.

"The fate of nations is still decided by their sword. You can talk of orderly tribunals and honored referees, but your duty in your schools, the gentle, peaceful of the quiet life, you may strike from your book the last note of every martial anthem, and yet out in the smoke and thunder will always be the tramp of hooves and the alert, uniformed face. Men may prophesy and women pray, but peace will come here to abide forever on this earth and only when the dream of childhood—the accepted charts to guide the generations of men—no longer lead to a life of blood, the atmosphere of our national life is filled with the march of armies, the hum of hummed steel, somehow although the sunlight of peace is all about us, there is peace and then the gleam of bayonets in its radiant fire and a flash of swords in its silver beams.

"Show, at times there runs a red streak right down the foundation of this republic which makes the structure tremble and all the country pauses and listens, then returns to work. Somehow, although the future welcomes us, it does so with the muffled hand; somehow, although you can not put your finger on the cause, there is a universal fear, the mother watching while her children sleep; now and then hears the bugle call, the tramp of soldiers, and, staring in the darkness of her dream, she sees the "right turned face." My friends, in the name of our immortal founder who loved peace but hated war; in the name of Andrew Jackson, a soldier of necessity, but a man of peace from choice; in the name of Grover Cleveland, who turned in her knees the mightiest nation in this world, except our own, without generation or manufacture of a single shell or gun; in the name of Bryan, who has done more by his example and his pen to turn the peace trumpet of The Hague from a mere dream to a living reality than any other man; in the name of all the host of democracy, let us raise a protest against this policy of militarism that will be heard around the globe and will announce to all the nations that our pursuits are the pursuits of peace.

"And then my friends, we have another duty as followers of democracy and free government and that is to send a message to the people of the Philippine Islands four thousand miles over the seas. If I had the working of that message I would write four lines of the Declaration of Independence, and if any of our American friends could be the Declaration of Independence is not true, that it was simply the teachings of Jefferson, and that Jefferson was but a man, I would take them back in history two thousand years, and I would call their attention to him who walked on the shores of the lake of Galilee and taught that all men are equal before God."

INGALLS ON BUSINESS NEEDS.

Banker and Railroad Man Talks to Detroit Financiers.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 13.—Melville E. Ingalls of Cincinnati, president of the Merchants' National bank of that city and chairman of the board of the Big Four railroad, made the address of the evening at the semi-annual banquet Wednesday night at the Hotel Cadillac of the Bankers' club of Detroit. Former Secretary of the Treasury Leslie M. Shaw, who early in the evening made an address in Spanish, 25 miles away, was hurried into the city in a special car and made a brief talk to the bankers.

"Business Needs" was the topic of Mr. Ingalls' address and he declared that the three greatest necessities for the future success of business in this country are the repeal of the Sherman law, an addition to our banking laws and "peace, less talk, less legislation, less shrieking and less abuse."

"The fate of nations is still decided by their sword. You can talk of orderly tribunals and honored referees, but your duty in your schools, the gentle, peaceful of the quiet life, you may strike from your book the last note of every martial anthem, and yet out in the smoke and thunder will always be the tramp of hooves and the alert, uniformed face. SAYS THE PRIMARY MEANS NOTHING

SENATOR FORAKER ON RESULTS IN OHIO TUESDAY.

WHY TAFT WAS VICTOR

Secretary's Opponent Declares His Friends Refused to Participate Because of Character of the Call.

Washington, Feb. 13.—Senator J. B. Foraker Wednesday night gave out a statement as to the result of the primary elections in Ohio on Tuesday, when the Taft forces made practically a clean sweep in the selection of delegates to the coming republican state convention. In his statement Senator Foraker says:

"Nobody should be either surprised or misled by the result of the primaries held in Ohio. It has been common knowledge for weeks that the call for these primaries was of such character that my friends throughout the state refused to participate. Consequently there was no opposition to the selection of Taft delegates. Under such circumstances he would, of course, carry everything."

"Result indicates Nothing." "That the result of the primaries does not indicate anything conclusive should be manifest from the fact that the total vote polled will not represent more than ten per cent. of the Republicans of Ohio. There were only two districts in which there was any approach to a contest and those contests were due to the fact that there were opposing candidates in each district for the nomination to congress."

"In the Sixth district, the Taft candidate was defeated by 1,025, while in the Fifteenth district Mr. Dawes, the Taft leader and candidate for re-nomination, is probably beaten, according to the latest advices I have received. If there had been a primary in which we could have participated similar results would have been possible, if not probable, all over the state."

"Recurring to the state convention, it should be borne in mind that it will be composed of the representatives of only one faction of the party. Not because the people have so decided, but because the course of the Taft managers was such as to bar every body else out from participation."

SENSATION IN MURDER TRIAL.

"Unwritten Law" Defense Spoiled by Confession of Reputed Wife.

Bellefonte, Ill., Feb. 13.—During the trial in the circuit court Wednesday of Clyde Gant, charged with the killing of Henry Dickerman, whom Gant accused of having maintained improper relations with his wife and who pleaded the "unwritten law" in his defense, a sensation was created when the supposed wife of Gant was called to the witness stand. She was the only witness to the killing. Taking her place on the stand, she said: "I am not the wife of Clyde Gant. My name is Cora Simpson. We were together a year and a half, but we were never married."

The statement was a bomb shell to the defense. The provision of the law making it illegal for a wife to testify against her husband had been rolled upon by the defense.

MICHIGAN CONVENTION DATE.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 13.—The Republican state central committee met here Wednesday afternoon and fixed May 12 as the date and Grand Rapids as the place for the state convention to elect delegates at-large to the national republican convention. Hamilton will be temporary chairman, and Will A. Waldo of Detroit, secretary.

Gets Fourteen Years for Murder. Du Quoin, Ill., Feb. 13.—George Adams, formerly city marshal of Benton, Ill., east of this city, has been sentenced to 14 years in the penitentiary for the killing of John Malone last October. Malone, it is said, had been drinking and threatened Adams' life. Adams pleaded self-defense, and it was generally expected that he would be acquitted.

GIRL'S LOVE USED AS BAIT

MOTHER'S PART IN BARGAINING FOR COL. SNELL'S GOLD.

Ardent Epistles, Said to Have Been Written by Minister's Wife, Read at Trial.

Clinton, Ill., Feb. 13.—The pitiful, miserable story of a woman's sordid desire for money was revealed in all of its revolting phases in the famous Snell will case Wednesday. It was the story of a wife—alleged to be a minister's wife—who bartered her soul for gold and sold into bondage her 15-year-old daughter.

Mute witnesses of an alleged contract made between Mrs. Lura Hamilton, wife of Rev. E. A. Hamilton, and the tottering old millionaire, Col. Thomas Snell, in the shape of letters declared to have been written by Mrs. Hamilton, were introduced and admitted as evidence in Judge Cochran's court. The letters were unsigned, but they were introduced as Mrs. Hamilton's by the attorneys, who declared there will be no trouble in proving their authenticity.

"Pet must love you. I will see to it that she is your little sweetheart. Send me money and she shall be yours and do anything you want," wrote the woman, and from all evidence the 55-year-old lover ran after both mother and daughter and supplied them with money to buy houses and lots and flattery, with which to bedeck themselves.

"I love you. You are my own sweetheart. I have loved you since I was a girl of 20 years. What a fool I was not to tell you then. I have suffered agonies for 25 years for love of you."

Long Search of Aged St. Louisian Has Sad Ending.

St. Louis, Feb. 13.—After having searched for 15 years for his missing son, Edward Wirtel, an aged man, wandered into the court of criminal correction Wednesday, attracted by having heard a prisoner's name mentioned as Edward Wirtel, Jr., and he made inquiries and was taken to the prisoner's cage, where he came face to face with his missing son, who was to be tried for burglary.

"My God, it is my son," exclaimed the aged father. "You are my son" and he fell to the floor in a faint. He

A SIMPLE STORY

All about two numbers in White Muslins for waists and dresses.

HOW WE GOT THEM. A manufacturer anxious to do business, who had on hand several thousand pieces of WHITE MUSLINS which he owned at old prices sold us what we wanted at very LOW FIGURES.

WHY WE SELL THEM. We could easily get more than what we ask for these muslins, but we know it will strengthen the white goods department, create a good impression by giving people the benefit of this fortunate purchase, make friends for us to sell them LOW.

ABOUT THE STYLE. These WHITE MUSLINS come in plain and broken checks and plaids, some with embroidered dots and checks in a large variety of designs.

OUR PRICES. There are two lots—both 28 inches wide. THE PARISIAN MERCERIZED while fine enough to sell for 35c to 40c, we offer at 25c. THE ORGANDIE CHECKS, the fine grade of which is apparent to any woman, we offer at 20c.

We have a good supply of them now but predict a large sale. Such values are exceptional. Wise ones will buy early.

The New Dress Goods

Several hundred pieces are here, spring and summer styles, all colors, many weights, materials for all occasions, and NOW is the time to call and get first pick.

Ready-to-Wear Garments

We are showing NEW SPRING CREATIONS in SKIRTS, SUITS, AUTOMOBILE COATS, SHIRT WAISTS. A beautiful assortment of strictly late things for women who have to buy early. We do not claim that our stock of SKIRTS and SUITS is as complete as it will be in about ten days. Manufacturers are working on our orders and hurrying out shipments as fast as they can. A good time to buy before we get rushed in our ALTERATION DEPARTMENT.
